Welcome to Cold River Camp!

Summer has finally arrived: the birds are singing; the flowers are in bloom. It's time for Camp! We are excited for our first season as Managers and pleased as punch to be surrounded by a fantastic staff and crew in this beautiful nook of the White Mountains. We can't wait to welcome you here.

Among staff and crew you may see a few familiar faces. Chef Jason DeVries returns for another season of outstanding meals. Meg Holland joins us as Assistant Manager, bringing a wealth of knowledge gained through years of connection with CRC. Former crew members Stefan Gaschott and Graham Blanchette return for another summer. Former campers Jenny Dean, Evan Doucett, and Ellie Morris are now part of the crew!

It is our hope that you will find your days as full, or as empty, as you wish them to be. There are hikes and walks, for all skill levels, leaving right from Camp or only short drive away. There's the river to cool your toes. There are blueberries in the fields. There's the Lodge, porch, library, and Tea House for sitting, reading, chatting, snoozing,...

The Conant Lodge is 100 years old this summer. We won't let that milestone go by unheralded. But now it's time to settle in and get down to the business of summer. Relax and enjoy your stay. Welcome.

A WELCOME FROM YOUR TRIP LEADERS

The tradition of great led hikes continues at CRC. Last fall the AMC mandated that all of our leaders, hikers and naturalists, be certified in CPR, WFA (Wilderness First Aid), and the AMC's General Leadership training. Since then, many of our leaders have become certified, but, unfortunately, we did lose some. Therefore, this year we will have only three certified leaders per week, or the equivalent, and will offer two hikes of varying levels of difficulty each day. Naturalists will lead traditional hikes in length and difficulty but with a focus on our natural world.

Our leaders have spent many years hiking in the area around CRC and in the White Mountains and are willing to provide information to guests who want to hike on their own. With only two hikes being offered each day, and access to the Wilderness Areas limited, it's likely that more of our guests will be organizing their own hikes. In keeping with CRC's Sustainability Policy, remember that there are many hikes of varying degrees of difficulty within Evans Valley – from rocky summits to cool, inviting pools – some of which can be done from Camp on foot. If you must drive, carpooling is always encouraged.

Our trip leaders have one goal in mind – to see that our guests have a safe, enjoyable vacation at our beloved Cold River Camp. Wherever your footsteps take you, take time to relax, hike, read that book you've been neglecting, paint, take a nap, study the natural world at Camp, swim, canoe, and dine on Jason's great cooking. Step back in time, away from our current world of stress and have a great time at Cold River Camp, then return to the "real" world invigorated and ready for its challenges. See you on the hiking trails---

GREETINGS FROM THE CHATHAM TRAILS ASSOCIATION

CTA • 22 Grove Place, Unit 29 • Winchester, MA 01890

As you take to the trails to explore the Evans Notch area, the chances are good that you will find yourself at a trail junction and see a sign sporting the Chatham Trails Association logo. You may notice that the trail is easy to see and follow and that you are not getting brushed by wet leaves as you pass. You are hiking on a trail cared for by the volunteers of CTA.

In 1922 a group of Cold River Camp volunteers formed the Chatham Trails Association to improve hiking in the Evans Notch. In the early years before the National Forest had a trail system, the need was to build create new routes and build new trails so hiker could enjoy scenic and interesting areas. CTA continues that tradition today but with a purpose of maintaining about 40 miles of trails, a task that becomes more important as trail use increases.

CTA has an important role in keeping Evans Notch and Cold River Camp a premier hiking destination. The work weekends are only one part of our trail stewardship, caring for about 40 miles of trails is a year round effort. The USFS budget is tight, $$ not available for full staffing. Trails suffer.

The success of our work is not just achieved by the boots-in-the-mud, tools-in-hand crews but with the essential hours of supportive work accomplished by members engaged in tool and sign maintenance, camp chores, office and paperwork tasks. It is the team work that makes CTA the vital program it is today and I thank each of you for your contribution to this success.

This spring over 50 volunteers, including 10 new volunteers, gathered to perform basic maintenance preparing the trails for summer hiking. Volunteers installed 6 new signs, cleaned and repaired 362 waterbars, removed 55 blown down trees and cut brush along several miles of the trails. The volunteers also did an assessment of the trail conditions and work needed. The assessment is used by CTA and the Forest Service to plan future work. Members invested over 630 hours performing basic maintenance and improvement projects. Our friends from Trailwrights joined us again this year to install waterbars and improve the drainage on the Stone House Trail.

The "Trail Adopter" program Adopters visit their trail three or four times each year performing basic maintenance and monitoring trail conditions. The commitment of these hikers is helping our stewardship efforts become year round. This year, seven members have adopted 12 miles of trail. If you would like to adopt a trail (or part of a trail) contact us. We will provide tools and training.

We hope that you will join CTA in our trail stewardship. Since most of the work takes place in the spring we seek the help of all hikers. While you are hiking take a few minutes to move brush off the trail or clear a blocked water bar, make a note of fallen trees blocking the trail or other CTA will be join camp hike leaders for a "Trail Stewardship" hike. As we hike the group will learn about features of trail design and construction and challenges to maintaining trails in good condition. We will spend part of the day making some improvements on the trail and learning how we can keep the trails of Evans Notch in good condition for future generations of hikers. We invite you to join us.

Visit Brickett Place. CTA, CRC, USFS and Sable Mountain Enterprises partnered to improve the exhibits. USFS has secured grant of $400,000 to repair and restore building. Nearly 100 people stop in each day to learn more about Evans Notch. The center is open Friday to Monday throughout the summer.

We welcome new members and trail volunteers. In addition to volunteers out on the trails, members are needed for committee and support functions. For information, contact us at our website < www.chathamtrails.org > or by mail at Chatham Trails Association, 22 Grove Place, Unit 29, Winchester MA 01890 or through the camp managers. Thank you for all your support. Have a wonderful vacation and enjoyable hiking.

Volunteer Opportunities at Cold River Camp

Cold River Camp is successful because of the efforts of its volunteers. All camp activities are overseen by a committee of volunteer committee members assisted by a group of volunteers with special interests and specific responsibilities. The committee hires the managers and crew for each summer season, but volunteers organize and run a busy off-season schedule of workshops, camp maintenance and trail work. Therefore, when we say that volunteers are the lifeblood of CRC, it's not just an empty phrase -- it really is the truth! New volunteers are always welcome. If you enjoyed your Camp experience, would you be willing to share your talents to make CRC an even better place? You do not need a background in education, recreational management or environmental science -- a simple willingness to help is more important.

How Can I Volunteer at CRC? Volunteering for Cold River Camp takes many forms, and your contributions of time and effort are welcomed in a variety of areas. Please use this form to be contacted (on a "no obligation" basis) about ways you can help CRC.

Hike Leaders/Naturalists: Would you like to be a hike leader or naturalist? Hike leaders receive training and undergo an "apprenticeship" program before they become leaders. Naturalists also receive training. Both hike leaders and naturalists are encouraged to keep their skills sharp by participating in periodic "refresher" sessions. Special interests or a background in these areas are certainly helpful, but people skills, common sense and a willingness to see to it that guests have a good time are much more important.

Maintenance: Keeping CRC's buildings and grounds operating requires continuing effort. Volunteers perform needed maintenance on selected weekends in the spring and fall. Please join us for one or more of these weekends. We get a lot done and have a lot of fun doing it!

People with skills in plumbing, electrical work and carpentry are very welcome. We also need people willing to paint, do landscaping, prune shrubs/trees, do assorted simple jobs, and to cook for the volunteers.

Individual and Committee Activity Involvement: Individuals and committees administer various aspects of CRC life. CRC also hosts a number of weekend conferences and workshops in the off-season. Volunteers make these possible. Some of these opportunities include:

- Maintenance/Facilities
- Extension Season Crew
- Closing Weekend Crew
- Naturalist Weekend Crew
- Flower Gardening
- Annual Reunion Committee
- Winter Season Activities
- Trail Work Weekends (with C.T.A.)
- Camp Opening Weekend Crew
- Publicity & Communication
- Conservation & Education
- Land Management and Planning
- CRC Committee
- Assisting in Other Events / Activities

Helpful Hints for CRC

by Sally Morris

Here is a glimpse into the possibilities that draw us back each year to CRC. Are you new to Camp? Did you think you had exhausted all the options? Let us share some of the customs that old timers know to make a week at camp even more enjoyable.

Packing List: Summer hikers know that they need good boots and socks, raincoats and warm layers, water bottles, maps, sunscreen, and bug dope, in addition to snacks and lunch, before they hit the trail. At CRC, close to brooks and rivers, some people pack a swimsuit and light towel, or even water shoes, for trips. Some prefer to pack lunch in reusable containers (i.e., sandwich boxes and snack cups) from home to reduce waste.

Enjoy time in Camp: CRC is first and foremost a hiking camp, but it is also so beloved in large part for the companionship can be found so easily just inside the gate. The buildings were designed to encourage people to enjoy each other's company, but also to provide retreat and relaxation. How do campers while away the day when they just don't feel like hiking? Reading, drawing, or napping on the porch is refreshing. Some spend part of the day picking from the low-bush blueberry meadow. Gardeners enjoy the garden around the porch, designed with local and xeriscaping plants, complete with a map and botanical names. The garden is full of birds, especially hummingbirds, for the ornithologists.

Interior of Hall, Cold River Camp, North Chatham, N.H.

The Rec Hall, with a piano and a ping pong table, is the spot for evening programs. Guests can read through naturalist materials on the walls and tables. The building provides a great option for rainy day activities.

The Camp Library is for people who crave silence and a good book, or perhaps a little unfinished work. For children, the Lodge provides a well-loved collection of books for all ages in addition to board games and cards.

Rather than a rigorous day hike, some campers enjoy the gentle trails that encircle camp: the Conant Path and the Tea House Trail, both of which lead to the Cold River and can be combined into one nice loop. Small children enjoy the varied woodland views along the Conant Path, which starts behind the Cox cabin, skirts along a farm property, then descends to the river, providing lots of puttering opportunities in little streams, full of mushrooms and fungi. Occasional benches along the way or glimpses onto the river are a treat to discover. The Tea House is a screened gazebo, a soothing spot with the sounds of the brook and the river just below. Campers enjoy this retreat for art projects, reading, or a quiet lunch picnic.

Early mornings at Camp are magical. The sunrise cresting over Little Deer, lighting the Baldfaces, draws the early bird to the Porch where the weather update is posted and hot coffee, tea, or hot chocolate is ready before the horn blows. On cold mornings, the fire in the Lodge draws people together before breakfast to plan their day's outing.

Other Tips: Some pack a sleeping bag or comforter instead of heavy wool blankets. Families with children prefer battery operated lamps to the kerosene. Wool blanket under the bottom sheet makes the bed warmer.

Outings or Activities: Post-dinner drive to Moose Blind or Deer Hill Bog Blind. Esther Williams Pool (on the Wild River) for a slightly warmer swim. Sebeago Lake beaches and Songo Locks. Antiquing in Bethel. Eastman Homestead Day on the Farm. Square Dancing in the Rec Hall. Games on the Lawn (soccer, badminton, Frisbee, tether ball). Playground. Pre-breakfast hike up Little Deer. Sing-a longs. Finding and exploring the lesser known trails: Speckled's Cold Brook Link Trail to the Ledges. Albany Basins. Grafton Notch. Mount Sabbatus. Lowe's Bald Spot. Rumford White Cap.

A CENTURY OF THE LODGE

For guests of Cold River Camp, the center of camp life is Conant Lodge. It is the first building we glimpse as we drive in the main entrance at the start of a week, and usually our final memory of our stay is the sound of the bell signaling our departure. In between, we enjoy the camaraderie of meals, the assembly of groups for hiking, canoeing, and other outings, and the pleasant buzz of conversation on the porch or beside the fireplace. If we were to ask the person with the longest memories of CRC about this building, the answer might begin, "Well, it's always been here..." As far as the AMC's tenure at Cold River Camp is concerned, that statement is true: the Lodge, and five other structures (Barracks, Tower, the Library, the Office, and Cox Cabin) were standing when CRC welcomed its first guests ninety years ago, on July 1, 1919.

Like many of New England's older buildings, though, this place has a history that reaches further back than its current owner, predating the AMC's acquisition of the property earlier that year. Over time, fragments of that "pre-history" have been passed down, rather like a jigsaw puzzle that has various pieces missing. At times, pieces from other puzzles have been added, such as the oral tradition that CRC was originally a church camp – not far off the mark, but not accurate. Over the past few years, a CRC group has been working on that puzzle. We do know that the Lodge dates from 1909. Its centennial is a fitting occasion to tell more of the story.

Ted Barrett has traced the successive ownership of the property that became CRC, from the early settlement of Chatham to the present. We know that it was known as the "Mill Place," indicating it was the site of one of the number of water-powered mills in the Valley. In the 1890's, when the US Geological Survey mapped this area for the first time, a small black square indicated a structure, most probably a house, on this site, although the map's scale makes it impossible to pinpoint its exact location. To judge by the photos taken in the early 1920's, the "campus" in 1906 would have been mostly open fields, reverting to second- or third-growth forest – much as our blueberry fields are still trying to do. The views of the surrounding hills and mountains were largely unencumbered, and spectacular. To the north, clear-cuts marked the aftermath of lumbering. To the west, the upper slopes of South Baldface were covered in scorched soil and blackened tree trunks, the scars of the devastating forest fires of 1903. The Valley Road was a dirt track that dead-ended a few miles north, at the old Brickett farmhouse. This would have been something of what Wilford Lash Robbins saw when he visited the property prior to acquiring it. At that point, the 38 acres of the "Mill Place" were part of Deer Hill Farm, which still stands, just south of Camp on Route 119.

Dr. Robbins was an Episcopal clergyman. Born in Boston in 1859, he had attended Amherst College, graduating in 1881, and the Cambridge Divinity School, an Episcopal seminary. After serving as rector of a church in Lexington, Massachusetts for two years, he was chosen for the prestigious position of Dean of the All Saints Cathedral in Albany, New York in 1887. In 1903, he became dean of the General Theological Seminary (GTS) in New York City. A Phi Beta Kappa scholar at Amherst, he was the author of several books, dealing with the reconciliation of faith and belief with science. He also served as a trustee of Amherst College.

It is not clear what specifically drew Robbins specifically to buy property in the Cold River Valley. His obituary mentions his having been acquainted with the White Mountains since boyhood, and having explored them in the company of local guides. He had also gone on hunting trips to the Maritime Provinces of Canada. During his time in Albany, he had vacationed in the Adirondacks, but he had also stayed at Deer Hill Farm, staying with its owners, the Charles Chandler family. His superior in Albany, Bishop William Doane, was a long-time summer resident of Mount Desert Island. Robbins was not unusual in seeking a rural retreat from the oppressive heat of the city in the summertime. Elsewhere in New England, other urban professionals had begun to acquire old homesteads, and either renovate them or replace them with new structures. Robbins chose the latter course. The main building – which he christened "The Ledges" after the prominent outcrops on South Baldface – was built in 1909 in what is known as "Shingle Style," popular in that era. The main building was followed by others. In all probability, the Library and Office, as well as Tower, were all residential. Cox Cottage was built for Robbins' married sisters: Robbins himself never married. The Barracks served as a chapel, and a number of the chairs in the present lodge were originally used for worship, perhaps by visiting seminarians. As an ordained priest, Robbins would have conducted daily services, but we also do not know why he built a facility with a capacity for up to 30 guests. No doubt he made use of local residents for cooking, maintenance, and other tasks.

During his tenure as dean of GTS, Robbins was considered an able administrator. In April of 1916, however, he stepped down from his position, for reasons that are not clear. Press reports indicated he had "suffered a nervous breakdown due to overwork," and was given a leave of absence. He also resigned from the Board of Trustees at Amherst at the same time. Apparently, it was these circumstances that led him, two years later in 1918, to put "the Ledges" up for sale, and to retire to Birchmont Farm, a property he owned outside Bethel, Maine, where he lived until his death in 1927.

That fall, a group of AMC members were staying just up the road at the Royce House on a hiking holiday. On one of their walks along the Valley Road, the "For Sale" sign at the Robbins property caught their attention. The group of "Appalachians" soon reached a consensus that it would be an excellent addition to the Club, which at that time had a permanent camp at Three Mile Island on Lake Winnepesaukee, and owned other reservations elsewhere in New Hampshire and Massachusetts. After their return to Boston, the group formed an ad hoc committee, headed by Frank Mason and Theodore Conant. Mason was treasurer of a savings bank. Conant, a retired businessman, had joined the AMC on the recommendation of his doctor, and quickly became a leader of weekend walking trips in the countryside outside Boston. The group initiated fund-raising to meet Dean Robbins' asking price of $5,000, and made an initial proposal to the Trustees for Real Estate, the AMC committee in charge of Club properties. They were turned down. Then, in the new year, they gained an influential ally, Philip Ayres, the new president of the Club, and the head forester of the Society for the Protection of New Hampshire Forests. Ayres agreed with their desire for a camp in the eastern White Mountains, and persuaded the Trustees to re-consider. They approved the proposal, with a provision that there was to be no charge against the operating funds of the AMC for the first three years of operation.

Immediately after the decision was reached, Conant took Frank Mason aside. Noting that the funds the committee had raised would be needed for supplies and other operating costs, Conant indicated that he was prepared to assume the full purchase price himself. Mason and the rest of the committee accepted this generous offer, the purchase went forward, and in the spring of 1919, "The Ledges," with its 38 acres and six buildings, and the furnishings in them, became AMC property, and was renamed "Cold River Camp." An illustrated prospectus was quickly printed and distributed to Club members. Hattie Chandler, a member of a long-time family in the Valley, was engaged as cook for the summer. Tents, cots, blankets, and other items were purchased to supplement the accommodations available in the buildings. Additional furnishings were hastily acquired in late June, when it became clear that the first group of campers would be larger than expected. Conant provided the funds for this, and made subsequent contributions to Cold River, most notably underwriting the cost of building the Rec Hall. His gifts to Camp totaled over $20,000 – no small amount for those times. In recognition of his role, the main building was renamed "Conant Lodge, and remains that to this day.

Over the years, changes have been made. Electricity has taken the place of oil lamps, the kitchen has been expanded and upgraded more than once, and the dining porch was added as camp capacity grew with the construction of additional cabins. New furnishings have been acquired, although some of the original chairs are still in use. More importantly, though, the spirit of Camp still remains what it was for Dean Robbins and his relatives and friends, a quiet corner away from the busy world.

The Convent

Something you may not have known about 'Convent' during the summer the building known as 'Convent' serves as quarters for female crew. However, in the offseason – October 1st through April 30th - it is available as a 'Winter Cabin' rental. The cabin is winterized with an efficient wood stove to provide heat and, if need be, an extra cooking surface. There is electricity in the cabin and a small kitchen area. It sleeps six in the bunk room, but is not limited to six guests. ♦ The kitchen comes equipped with a microwave oven, a small refrigerator, a two-burner hot plate, a coffee maker and a hot water kettle. There is no running water during the off-season (camp water is turned off). Guests bring their own water, food, bedding and linens. Blankets, pillows and wood for the stove are provided. ♦ In the winter, the driveway gates are locked, so a key is provided. A small area at the edge of 113 is plowed at the northern entrance. The camp road is not plowed beyond this point. ♦ Current rates are $50/night. Payment in advance is requested. ♦ New this year: Camp is installing a composting toilet attached to the cabin for Winter Cabin guest use. ♦ If interested please contact the registrar for information and reservations. With confirmation of reservation guests receive cabin instructions and where to pick up the key. There is now an on-line calendar showing availability that can be accessed from the Winter Cabin page on our website: <http://amccoldrivercamp.org/>

The Camp History Project: A group of campers including Dwight Wilder, Ted Barrett, Mark Winkler and others are about to embark on updating/ writing a Camp history in time for the 100th anniversary. If you have Camp history or would like to help, please let us know.

THE CRC WEBSITE WWW.AMCCOLDRIVERCAMP.ORG

The website has been updated and improved since last summer to provide campers and guests with more information about the camp, a means of timely communication between the Camp Managers and campers in the weeks before their stay at camp, and information on Volunteer Opportunities at camp or in service to the CRC Camp Committee, the new CRC Nature Trail that uses both the Tea House and Conant Paths, and printable copies of the CRC's Early History 1919 - 1986, the Nature Trail Guide, and of the Trip Leader Handbooks. The site still provides a wealth of pictures of Camp, the cabins, camp activities, space availability and registration information for full or summer season and for the winter cabin. It also provides a chance to hear the CRC Camp Horn during time away from CRC.

Check out the new combined Tea House Path and Conant Path self guiding nature trail. Trail guide brochures will be included in the packets handed to our guests upon arrival at CRC and additional copies will be available in the Lodge and on the web. In addition, we're putting identifying labels along the combined trail for each different plant species.
